

AUTHORS

Zoran Aralica, has been working for the Institute of Economics Zagreb, department for Interdisciplinary Research. He obtained a Master's Degree at the Faculty of Economics, Zagreb in the field of Operational Research in 2004. Additionally, he attended the Amsterdam-Maastricht Summer University in August 2003 and the institutional economy workshop organized by Hertfordshire University in June 2004. He has been involved in projects of economic analysis, technological policy and energy. He is a member of the Croatian Association for Operational Research. The fields of his professional interest are industrial policy, technological policy and multivariate methods of statistics.

Katarina Bačić, graduated in 1999, and took her MA in 2004, at the Faculty of Economics, University of Zagreb. During her undergraduate course she won the Dean's Prize. Since 2000 she has worked in the Institute of Economics, Zagreb. She worked as junior assistant in the Department for Interdisciplinary Research, and after that as assistant in the Department for Business Cycles and Economic Forecasting. She is the author of scientific and technical papers in the fields of international economics and economic forecasting. She participates in scientific projects from the field of her expert interests.

Predrag Bejaković, took his doctorate at the Economics Faculty in Zagreb, and now works in the Institute of Public Finance, Zagreb. He was a Kingdom of Denmark scholar in Copenhagen, a Fulbright scholar at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and a British Council scholar at Essex and Bath universities. He has taken part in a number of projects, such as The Underground Economy, The Development of the Tax Administration and Pensions Reform and a Sustainable Budget of the Institute of Public Finance, and The Employment Policy Programme of the Croatian Government. He publishes in scientific and professional journals such as Financijske teorija i praksa and Časopis za društvena istraživanja. He is co-author of a number of books from the areas of the economy, public finance and labour economics.

Ana-Maria Boromisa, took her doctorate at the Economics Faculty in Zagreb, a master's in European Studies, College of Europe, Natolin,

viii

Poland and her first degree at the Electrical Engineering Faculty in Zagreb. Since 2001 she has been a member of the Croatian Energy Regulatory Council, where she is currently employed. Previously she worked in the Institute for International Relations in Zagreb, and has continued working on its research projects. She has written several articles published in Croatian and foreign publications. Research interests: the enlargement of the EU to the states of CEE, particularly the economic criteria for accession, sectoral reform in the applicant states and the possible effects of the enlargement of the EU to the states of SEE.

Mirta Kapural, 1998 graduated from the Faculty of Law in Zagreb (awarded the Chancellor's Prize). In 1999 she completed a master's in Contemporary European Studies at the University of Sussex, UK. From 1999-2001 she worked in the Ministry of European Integration, Department for Legal Adjustment. She also worked as a trainee in the European Commission, Brussels (September 2000 to March 2001) in DG Environment, dealing with enlargement issues. Between August and October 2001 she was Governmental Representative in the UN Office for Human Rights in Geneva. From September 2001 until September 2004 she was employed in the Governmental Office for Human Rights on international co-operation with the EU and UN. Currently she works as a legal adviser in the Croatian Competition Agency, anti-trust division. Professional interests: EU competition law and trade law, enlargement and external relations of the EU, free movement of persons in the EU, constitution of the EU, human rights.

Ines Kersan-Škabić, took her first degree at the Dr. Mijo Mirković Faculty of Economics and Tourism Pula, master's degree in 1997 and doctoral degree in 2002 at the Faculty of Economics, University of Zagreb. She is currently working as assistant professor for the course International Economics at the Dr. Mijo Mirković Faculty of Economics and Tourism in Pula. She also teaches the course European Economic Integration, which she introduced into the curriculum and syllabus. She is the author of several papers about EU enlargement. Research interests: processes and economic effects of the EU enlargement, the relationship between the EU and Croatia, EU trade policy, EU regional policy, competitiveness of the Croatian economy. She has been a member of the Council for European Integration of the County of Istria since 2004.

Jasenska Kranjčević, graduated from the Zagreb Faculty of Architecture at which she also earned her master's degree. She is employed at the Ministry of Environmental Protection, Physical Planning and Construction. She has published several scientific papers in the field of physical planning. She was scholar of the Government of the Republic of Austria in 1992 and 1995. She contributed to the development of the Croatian Bibliographic Lexicon of Miroslav Krleža Lexicographic Institute, Zagreb and Saur allgemeines Künstlerlexikon (München – Leipzig). She has delivered papers at several international and domestic conferences on rural areas. Within the Working Community of Danube Regions (ARGE Donauländer – Ministry of Environmental Protection, Physical Planning and Construction), in the period 2001-2002, she was leader for Croatia of the international project EDP – Datenkatalog (electronic data processing).

Dubravko Mihaljek, is a Senior Economist at the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland. He analyses global financial markets and macroeconomic developments and policies in the emerging market economies in Asia, Latin America and Central and Eastern Europe. He was an economist at the IMF in Washington from 1990-99 (Fiscal Affairs, European and Asian Departments). He had degrees in economics from the Universities of Zagreb (1981), Minnesota (MA, 1986) and Pittsburgh (PhD, 1990). Authored over 80 papers in macroeconomics, monetary and exchange rate economics, fiscal theory and policy, EU enlargement, economic development and banking. He referees for several professional economics journals.

Katarina Ott, is director of the Institute of Public Finance, editor of the journal Financijska teorija i praksa, trustee of the Prof. Dr. Marijan Hanžeković Foundation, and associate professor at the Faculty of Economics and the Faculty of Science – Mathematics, at the University of Zagreb. She heads projects and publishes papers in the wider area of public sector economics. Her main area of interest is the relationship between the government and the economy, above all the underground economy, the budget, public sector reform, local finances, EU accession and in particular public sector transparency, government accountability and citizen participation.

Rüdiger Pintar, studied economics and sociology at the universities of Cologne and Munich, and graduated in 1969 at the University of

x

Cologne. He was employed at an institute for social research at the same university, dealing with research on occupational retraining programmes and the labour market. In 1974, He took a Ph.D. in economics and social sciences at the University of Cologne. Since 1978 he has been employed at the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung: 1978-1984 in Tanzania as adviser to the Ministry of Manpower Development in Dar es Salaam; 1984-1988 working at the headquarter of FES, in charge of projects in Eastern and South Africa; 1988-1992 representative of FES in Tunisia and Algeria; 1992-1999 again back at the headquarter of FES, responsible for projects in SEE; since 2000 head of the regional office of FES in Zagreb, in charge of projects in Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Paul Stubbs, is a Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Economics in Zagreb. He is an associate of the Globalism and Social Policy Programme based at the University of Sheffield, UK and of the South-East European Research Centre in Salonika, Greece. His recent publications have focused on social policy reform in SEE, civil society and social movements in post-Yugoslav countries, multi-level governance and regional policy, corporate social responsibility, and social indicators for social inclusion. He has been a consultant for a number of organisations including UK DFID, UNICEF, Save the Children (UK) and UNDP. He is book reviews editor of the journal Global Social Policy. Together with Siniša Zrinščak, he teaches courses on “Globalization and Social Policy” and ‘Globalization and the Non-Profit Sector’ at post-graduate level in Croatia.

Vedran Šošić, has a BA from the Faculty of Economics in Zagreb. He works as an economist at the research department of the Croatian National Bank and as a subcontractor at the Faculty of Economics in Zagreb (Department of Demography). He has consulting experience with the Government Office for Social Partnership (reform of labour market regulation) and has participated on the Human Development Report – Croatia 2002, the Institute of Economics, Zagreb and UNDP. He is the author of several chapters in books and papers in journals. His fields of interests are labour markets in transition, monetary systems and problems in transition economies (dollarization, barter and arrears) and the unofficial economy.

Boris Vujčić, holds a BA, a MA and a DSc in Economics from the University of Zagreb. In addition, he received diplomas in Economics from Montpellier University (France), Michigan State University and has had in-service training at the European Commission in the Monetary Matters Department in Brussels. Between 1992 and 1994 he was a visiting fellow at the Institute of Development Studies at the University of Sussex in Brighton, visiting lecturer at the University of Freiberg, Germany and visiting scholar at the University of Kentucky, USA. From 1994 to 2000, he was External Collaborator for the International Labour Organization and consultant to the European Commission. He joined the Croatian National Bank in 1997, where he was Director of the Research Department, before becoming Deputy Governor in 2000. He also started as assistant professor at the University of Zagreb in 1989 and became Professor in 2003. He is also lecturer at the Diplomatic Academy of the Croatian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and at the University of Zagreb, Department of Mathematics. His fields of expertise are macroeconomics, International finance and labour economics.

Siniša Zrinščak, took his first, master's, and doctoral degrees at the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Zagreb. He is Associate Professor in the Chair of Social Policy at the Faculty of Law, University of Zagreb and editor-in-chief of the journal Revija za socijalnu politiku. Research interests: social policy and sociology of religion, and in particular social and religious changes in post-communism, relation between globalization, Europeanization and social policy, civil society development, and church-state relations. He has taken part in a number of projects and has published books and papers in domestic and international journals.