

AUTHORS

Dragan Bagić, is a research fellow at the Sociology Department of the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences in Zagreb. He is currently writing his doctoral dissertation from the area of the sociology of social movements, and is sharing in the teaching load of the department in the topics of sociology of migrations and classical sociological theory. As well as these areas, he is also interested in political sociology, and has published works from the area of the methodology of social investigation. He has been engaged in public opinion research since 2000, when he was employed in the Puls agency. So far, as a Puls employee, he has carried out numerous surveys concerning the views of members of the public about EU entry, while the present paper represents a continuation of his interest in the topic within the framework of his academic work.

Ana-Maria Boromisa, took her doctorate at the Economics Faculty in Zagreb, a master's in European Studies, College of Europe, Natolin, Poland and her first degree at the Electrical Engineering Faculty in Zagreb. She works in the Institute for International Relations in Zagreb. She was a member of the Croatian Energy Regulatory Council (2001-2005). She teaches at Faculty of Electrical Engineering and Computing and Faculty of Political Science in Zagreb. She has written several articles published in Croatian and foreign publications. Research interests: the enlargement of the EU, economic/sectoral reform in candidates, the possible effects of the enlargement of the EU to SEE.

Mirko Hempel, took degrees in African studies and economics (Leipzig University). He worked for a year in the German Institute for Development Policy, headquartered in Berlin and Seoul/Pusan, where he worked on a study of South Korea. In 1991 he started working for the Friedrich Ebert Foundation, in Namibia and then in Botswana. In 1997 he took over the management of the office of the Friedrich Ebert Foundation in Erfurt (Thüringen, Germany). In 2000 he moved to Foundation head office in Bonn, where he was put in charge of the Latin America and Caribbean department, and was also responsible for the offices in New York, Geneva and Mexico. In the summer of 2001 he headed the Foundation in Dakar/Senegal. At the end of 2004, he moved to Zagreb, and is currently filling the post of head of the office of the Foundation for Croatia.

Ivana Jović, took her degree at the Economics Faculty in Zagreb. She is employed as senior economist in the office of the economic research and strategic planning directorate of Privredna Banka Zagreb d.d. She obtained experience in the Institute for Macroeconomic Analysis and Planning of the Ministry of Finance of the Republic of Croatia, in the World Bank office in Zagreb, and in the Delegation of the European Commission to Croatia. As consultant, she took part in the World Bank project “Strengthening Budget Management Project Integrated Performance Measurement and Budgeting Programme”. Her research interests include public finances and state aid in the EU and Croatia.

Ljiljana Kaliterna Lipovčan, is Assistant Director at the Ivo Pilar Institute of Social Sciences in Zagreb. She received her PhD in psychology from the University of Zagreb in 1989. Her research interests include subjective indicators of quality of life, psychophysiology of work and psychological consequences of ageing. She teaches organizational psychology at the Department of Psychology, Croatian Studies, University of Zagreb and at Zagreb’s School of Economics and Management. She heads a number of projects and has published papers in international and national journals, proceedings and books. She is a member of the National Research Council of the Republic of Croatia.

Marina Kesner-Škreb, graduated from the Faculty of Economics, University of Zagreb, at which she also earned her master’s degree. She worked at the Institute for Macroeconomic Analysis and Prognoses, and since 1992 has been employed at the Institute of Public Finance. She has published scientific papers in the fields of taxes, industrial policy and state aid. She is member of two negotiating teams with the EU (competition and taxes). Her main areas of interest: tax systems and policy, state aid according to EU rules, the role of the government in market economies and industrial policy.

Petra Leppee Fraize, obtained a master’s degree in European studies at the Sussex European Institute in Great Britain (2002). She has been working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and European Integration. She has attended numerous seminars on European integration issues in the country and abroad. She has attended a course at the Vienna Diplomatic Academy. She is a trainer in European matters in the framework of the Ministry’s training activities and has participated in some information projects. She is co-author of several publications on the EU and Croatian accession to the EU, author of the publication “Eurolimač” for youth, and she has participated in the project Entereurope of the Institute for International Relations in Zagreb. She is member of the non-governmental organisation European Education Forum. Fields of interests: political and institutional aspects of European integration, EU enlargement, future of Europe and communicating Europe to members of the public.

Tomislav Maršić, took his first degree in political science at the Freie Universität in Berlin in 2004. He has worked in different foreign policy-related institutions in Germany and Croatia, among others the German Institute for International and Security Affairs in Berlin and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and European Integration in Zagreb. He took part in a comparative research project on the connection between corruption and culture financed by the European Commission within the European Community Sixth Framework Programme. His fields of interest are Europeanisation and policy transfer research.

Dubravko Mihaljek, Senior Economist in the Monetary and Economic Department, Bank for International Settlements (BIS) in Basel, Switzerland. Monitors and analyses macroeconomic and financial market developments and economic policies in the global economy; drafts reports discussed by governors and other central bank officials meeting at the BIS. Senior Economist at the IMF in Washington, DC, Asian, European and Fiscal Affairs Departments (1990-99). Assistant Research Fellow at the Economics Institute, Zagreb (1982-89). Studied economics at Universities of Pittsburgh (PhD, 1990); Minnesota (MA, 1986); and Zagreb (Dipl oec, 1981). Published extensive research on macroeconomics, monetary and exchange rate economics, fiscal theory and policy, EU enlargement, economic development and banking.

Katarina Ott, is director of the Institute of Public Finance, editor of the journal Financial Theory and Practice, trustee of the Prof. Dr. Marijan Hanžeković Trust, and associate professor at the Faculty of Economics and the Faculty of Science – Mathematics, University of Zagreb. She heads projects and publishes papers in the wider area of public sector economics. Her main area of interest is the relationship between the government and the economy, above all the underground economy, the budget, public sector reform, local finances, EU accession and in particular public sector transparency, government accountability and citizen participation.

Zvezdana Prizmić-Larsen, received her PhD in psychology from the University of Zagreb in 2000. Currently she works as a research scientist at Washington University in St. Louis. She has been a research associate at the Ivo Pilar Institute of Social Science in Zagreb (1991-2001). Much of her research and publications have been in the area of shift work and its effects on health, productivity, and worker satisfaction, as well as mood and mood regulation. She still collaborates with the Ivo Pilar Institute on several projects concerning shift workers, subjective aging, quality of life and affect regulation. She was awarded a Fulbright Fellowship in 1996-97.

Višnja Samardžija, is head of the Department for European Integration in the Institute for International Relations (IMO) in Zagreb and was assistant minister in the Ministry for European Integration (2000-2004). She obtained her PhD (2003) and MA (1998) at the Faculty of Economics, University of Zagreb. She heads projects and publishes articles related to EU policy towards SEE and Croatian EU accession. She is editor of the IMO book series Europe, member of the editorial board of the web portal EnterEurope and has edited the IMO bulletin Euroscope. Lecturing at several European Studies programmes (Faculty of Political Sciences, Zagreb; J. J. Strossmayer University, Osijek and University of Zadar).

Ante Šalinović, is a sociologist with experience in market research and the media. He acquired his first degree in sociology at the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences in Zagreb, writing his undergraduate dissertation on the topic "Euroscepticism in Croatia". Currently he is attending the MBA programme at the Economics Faculty in Zagreb. Since 2000 he has been professionally engaged in market research, public opinion and the media in several Croatian research agencies. Since 2003 he has been the manager of the media research department of the Puls agency and has specialised in marketing and media research. He has taken part in a number of international symposia, at some of which he has read papers.

Aleksandar Štulhofer, is a professor of sociology at the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences of University of Zagreb, where he teaches sociology of sexuality and sociology of culture. He takes part in many research projects from the areas of the sociology of European integration, economic sociology, the dynamics of social capital and the sociology of sexuality. His latest books are Informedness about HIV/AIDS, views and sexual behaviour of migrant workers in the Republic of Croatia (2004), Sexuality and Gender in Postcommunist Eastern Europe and Russia (2005) and HIV/AIDS and the Young – Croatia 2005 (2006).

Snježana Vasiljević, took her degree at the Faculty of Law, University of Zagreb. During her undergraduate studies she won the Dean's Prize for the best student and the Rector's Prize. She won the prize of the American Bar Association for the best paper from the area of sexual discrimination. She took her master's at the Faculty of Law, University of Cambridge, Darwin College. She was an associate of United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM). She is employed at the Faculty of Law, University of Zagreb, European Public Law Department. As visiting researcher she specialised at the London School of Economics and Political Science, Faculty of Law, University of Liverpool and Johannes Kepler Universität Linz. Since 2003, she has been a permanent court interpreter for the English language and currently also works as an external assistant to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and European Integration translating the acquis. Her areas of professional interest are discrimination in the EU, including equality between men and women, racial discrimination and protection of ethnic minorities.

Igor Vidačak, is research fellow at the European Integration Department of the Institute for International Relations in Zagreb. He took his doctorate from the Faculty of Political Science in Zagreb, his master's at the College of Europe, Natolin and his first degree at the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Zagreb. His research interests include: interest representation and lobbying in the enlarged EU; role of civil society in the EU policy-making processes; institutional reforms and governance in the EU; impact of the EU integration on governance structures and policy paradigms in transition countries. He has written a number of papers published in Croatian and foreign publications.

Davor Vidas, Director of Marine Affairs and Law of the Sea Programme at the Fridtjof Nansen Institute, Norway. He began his academic career in international law at the Faculty of Law, University of Zagreb in 1984, and joined the Fridtjof Nansen Institute in 1992. He has since led many expert project teams, as well as been external consultant to international organisations such as OECD and UNEP. Since 1992 he has also taken part as member/adviser in several Norwegian delegations to international conferences, and given lectures and presentations at various universities, scientific institutions and international symposia. He is a member of the International Advisory Board of the Law of the Sea Institute at the University of California, Berkeley, and co-Chair of the IUCN Legal Expert Group on the Mediterranean. He publishes books on marine environmental protection, law of the sea, and polar areas as well as articles and studies. He published a collection of poems Northern Light.

Ivana Vlašić, graduated at the Faculty for Natural Science and Mathematics in Zagreb, Biology Department, specialization in ecology. She gained professional experience while still an undergraduate working for the Danish local authorities on issues related to the environment and with national research institutions in Malta. From 2002-2005 she worked on topics related to the EU pre-accession funds within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and European Integration, Directorate for Co-ordination of Assistance Programmes and Cooperation with EU. During that period she did a five-month stint in DG Environment, European Commission and was seconded for the six month contract as Sector Manager for Environment and Natural resources in the Delegation of the European Commission in Zagreb. Currently she is Head of Department for the programmes promoting economic and social cohesion in the Central State office for Development Strategy and Coordination of EU funds.

Mirna Vlašić Feketija, graduated at the Faculty for Natural Science and Mathematics in Zagreb and took her master's in environmental science at the University of Lund, Sweden. She gained her professional experience while still an undergraduate working for Swedish local authorities on issues related to the environment, and later with non-governmental organisations in Croatia. From 1998-2001 she worked on topics related to the EU in the Government Office for European Integration, then for two years as the Chief of the Minister's Cabinet in the Ministry of Environmental Protection and Physical Planning. Currently she is Secretary of the Government Committee for the EU Accession Negotiations.